Ground Reserved For Veterans Burial

For several years the members of the Wm. Martin Post VFW of Mokena, have been working on a plan whereby they might locate a plot of ground reserved for burial of veterans of U. S. Wars.

This plan culminated satisfactorily a few weeks ago when the committee of the Veterans met with the St. John Evangelical church cemetery board. At this meeting the cemetery board decided to set aside a plot of ground located in St. John's cemetery on Wolf Road which is directly to the left as one enters the cemetery extending about several hundred feet, and south to the first driveway. This plot will be reserved as a Memorial and burial place for veterans who fought in Wars of this country and their families. Lots in this plot are to be purchased from the cemetery board but the plot will be maintained by the VFW. They are planning to erect an appropriate monument and also a steel flag pole.

This is a forward step in Mokena taken by the VFW and cemetery board to create and perpetuate a final permanent resting place for those who fought in the defense of this country.

EXPECT 1000 VOTES TO BE CAST ON INCORPORATION

The most momentous issue New Lenox citizens have ever faced in the history of the community, will be the special election called for tomorrow, Saturday May 25th, to vote on incorporating the following area into either a village or city.

The polling place will be at Otto's Filling station on Lincoln highway. It will be open at 6 A. M. and close at 5 P. M.

Boundaries of the area extend from the Wabash railroad on the east to the Camp grounds on the west, and from a point one-fifth of a mile south of the Michigan Central railroad tracks on the south, to a point just south of Francis road on the north.

The people of New Lenox have done a lot of thinking about incorporation and here are a few thoughts of some of its forward looking citizens:

Doctor Ernest Plotow, principal of New Lenox Grade School: New Lenox is having its growing pains now, but I'm sure it will not fail to follow its evolutionary destiny.

George Stockley, retired president of the school board: The school board handles three times as much money as the village will for some time after incorporation and I've never heard of a cent that was misappropriated. This is a good example of the civic interest that we can expect after incorporation.

Ceward W. Batson, New Lenox Lumber and Hardware Co. We have nothing to worry about. We have a lot of fine men in New Lenox who can be depended upon to give us a good government at a surprisingly little increase in taxes.

Art Wirth, retired Grocer: When anybody or any group can pick up $3,000 by simply incorporating, I'll say grab it. The gasoline tax, tavern tax and utility tax is money we're entitled to when we have a responsible group that represents all of the people. Sheldon Hauck: New Lenox Coal & Feed Co. Well, I'd like to see street lights and I don't know of any other way to get them.

Miss Laura Morris, township librarian: I'm in favor of incorporation because we'll have a responsible group that we can turn to when we need police protection.

Amos Bruns, New Lenox Barber Shop: We need some means to curb the speeding trucks and cars on U. S. 30. We've tried every other way with out success.

Ed Walsh, real estate dealer: When I learned that the gasoline tax paid for all of the paved streets in Plainfield, Mokena and other places I couldn't understand why we didn't incorporate 10 years ago. We let an estimated $10,000 get away from us. The sooner we get organized the sooner we'll be able to do something about our dirty streets.

Harvey Frick, R. I. depot agent: I wish to remind the voters that in the Saturday election they will not be voting on water, they will not be voting on sewers, street paving nor street lights. They will only be voting on whether they want a responsible group to decide local affairs right here in the community. Election of such men will come after home government is voted in.

Photograph shows the coal czar, leader of United Mine workers, drawing applause as he arrives at a meeting of his 250-man policy committee, in Washington, D. C.

WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS QUINTS . . . Above is Dr. L. J. Smith with the Fairbury (Neb.) Cornhusker quint. They have been named after the Big Five. Left to right, England, Russia, China, United States and France. All but France are bulls. Although less than half the weight of average beef calves at birth, at 5½ months they are fully as big and as weighty as beef calves of the same age born singly. They will tour leading fairs this summer. Chamber of Commerce at Fairbury has built them a modern home. Wayne Photo.

CHINA'S FAMINE CORRIDOR . . . Chinese lad is shown carrying his starving mother from their Hunan farm into the village of Kung Ping, in the heart of Hunan's famine corridor. Starvation is even worse today.

USO SERVING G.I.s IN BRAZIL . . . In Brazil, home of the coffee bean, G.I.s patronize the USO cafeteria for a cup of American java. It accompanies the steak smothered in eggs which is the most popular dish with servicemen at the Natal USO. The USO still carries on in almost every country and section on the globe where G.I.s may be found. Much of their work is now devoted to troops on foreign soil.

PIONEER TO TEACH . . . Dr. Lee De Forest, 73, known as the "father of broadcasting," has accepted the position of director of the veterans training program in Chicago television laboratories. He will have 2,200 veteran students. De Forest is a veteran of the Spanish-American war. He developed the three-element (audion) tube.

FOR OPA . . . Secretary of the Treasury Fred M. Vinson, as he appeared before the senate banking and currency committee, conducting hearings on bill to extend life of OPA. He urged that the office of price administration be retained for the common good.

GETS NEW PAL . . . Life was meaningless for six-year-old Johnny Conklin when his dog, Rex, was killed by an auto, but things brightened when he acquired a new pal, six-week-old Lady, given to him by a sympathetic reader who saw his picture in the paper.

MARINES IN DANGER . . . Says Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, to senate naval affairs committee at hearing on proposed merger of the armed services. He stated that the unification legislation will in all probability spell extinction for the marine corps.

PROSECUTES JAPS . . . Joseph B. Keenan, representing the United States, as chief prosecutor at Japanese war crimes trials, as he presented the 55-count indictment against the criminals to be tried.

Artificial Breeding Shows Advancement

Expert Knowledge Is Vital Part of Plans

By W. J. Dryden

Results obtained by artificial breeding shows great possibilities of not only increasing returns from dairy cows but other farm animals, including sheep and poultry.

Artificial insemination or breeding requires expert knowledge. Those undertaking this work must be familiar with the anatomy and physiology of the reproductive organs and have a sound understanding of correct sanitary precautions.

Preparation of artificial vagina, care and collection of semen, its dilution and storage as well as the equipment required, places artificial insemination out of reach of the individual in nearly all cases.

Because of these factors, artificial breeding associations have been established in most states to carry on the work.

The quality of stock has been materially increased where artificial insemination has been practiced, and at a considerable reduction to the individual farmer. In many cases he is able to secure the services of a high quality bull that would not be possible, or financially feasible by using direct methods.

Good Luck Dinner Bell

The tone may be regulated by the length of the rawhide, as well as the type of horseshoe and density of welding. A series of chimes may also be made from horseshoes.

A good luck dinner bell may be made by welding two horseshoes together as shown in the illustration. A window sash serves as a clapper. It should be hung on rawhide.

Fast Hatching Proven

Desired Characteristics

Chicks that hatch first in any group should mature at an earlier date, should be predominately female, and should feather more rapidly than those that are slower in hatching. The later hatched chick should also have a higher mortality.

Tests at the Maine agricultural experiment station would indicate that hatching time is a matter of inheritance, thus by selection, these desirable qualities can be bred.

First Out

Place for Tools

Each barn could be equipped with a rack, as shown, in which all tools like shovels, hoes and forks could be placed to keep them from getting underfoot. Not only would it be a safety measure, but the tools would be kept in much better shape.

Vaccinate Against

Swine Erysipelas

In localities where swine erysipelas has appeared, farmers should vaccinate pigs against this disease as soon as possible. If the farm has been infected, vaccination is a must. This costly disease has spread so rapidly that it is now present in practically every state, the American Foundation for Animal Health reports. The disease may be mistaken for hog cholera by the average farmer.

A HUMAN tidal wave, headed for almost any sort of sporting competition, has struck baseball in a record sweep. All past records are being submerged in the way of attendance figures, even on the part of those teams who are conceded nothing better than sixth place.

It would not be surprising to see the newly bedecked Yankee stadium, under the operation of Larry MacPhail, crowd the two million mark before October reports. The Yankees are practically sure to set an all-time count at the busy turnstiles, with the Tigers not too far away. The Cubs and the Dodgers also should surpass their best year, with many thousands added to the list.

A sporting crowd is willing to take a heavier beating than any other section of the human race. All these frenzied multitudes ask is a chance to buy a ticket, then let nature take its course. These crowds make the sardine look like a rover in the wide-open spaces, with room to spare.

The Kentucky Derby set a new high in several directions. So probably will the Louis-Conn intermingling at the Yankee stadium in June.

The Rush to Sport

We have been asked to explain the overwhelming rush to sport. Well, we have few who can match in ability and color the headlines of the Golden Age following the First World war. I am referring again to Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Bobby Jones, Man o' War, Bill Tilden, Tommy Hitchcock, Devereux Milburn, Walter Hagen, Rogers Hornsby, Earl Sande and Red Grange. We have no such galaxy of famous names with which to conjure, although DiMaggio, Williams, Nelson, Hogan, Arcaro, Blanchard, Davis and a few others may be just as good.

It may be that the glamour of past years takes on too keen a hue and glint. But that Golden Age of Sport produced a pretty fair collection of talent and color. No such talent has been proved in this present postwar era up to date, but it may happen later.

It may be that the coming season in various sports will give us champions that can match the Old Guard of the lost and golden era. We don't believe so. But we know that sport will give us greater crowds than ever were known in the past.

We know that there will be more money than ever before wagered on the races through the mutuels and the bookmakers — a total surpassing 2 billion dollars. New York alone will pass 500 million through the mutuels.

In this era of peace following the blackness of the world's greatest war, there are two details that make this possible: (1) the reach for release — the excuse for taut nerves and (2) more widespread cash than this country has ever known previously. It is the same in England, even more so. This is no knock against the human race. It is only a natural reaction, even if it isn't the wisest and the sanest reaction. When was the human race ever sane or wise?

Some Big Questions

The season will soon begin to unroll a number of answers to various important questions.

No. 1. How will the Yankee pitching staff make out? Will it be consistently good enough to be even fairly close to the pitching strength of Tigers, Red Sox or Indians? Or the Senators?

No. 2. Can the Tiger infield hold up well enough to give Steve O'Neill's crack pitching staff the chance to win again?

No. 3. Can Leo Durocher find enough pitching to keep his Dodgers up with the Cardinals and Cubs? Especially the Cubs.

DESERT ROSE
By ROLLIN BROWN

W.N.U. FEATURES

Deputy sheriff Jim Doane is called in by sheriff Sam Flick to track down a gang of train robbers. The sheriff tells Jim that he believes the gang is led by a girl, the daughter of Pio Alvaro, a former rancher. Star La Rue, a cattleman who has bought Alvaro's ranch, reports to the sheriff that rustlers have stolen more than half his herd. He accuses the Alvaro girl. Sheriff Flick arranged for a special train to take Jim to the point in the desert in San Loreto county where the holdup took place. Jim knows Miss Alvaro, and doubts that she is the leader, or even a member of the gang. He trails the robbers by the hoofprints until his horse dies. Then he begins walking. Heat and thirst plague him.

CHAPTER II

"Uh-huh," agreed Flick; "that's it. That's sort of my gen'l idea, anyhow. Just keep it in mind. But one thing I'm stakin' my hat on, Doane. This train job was hatched from inside the Sand Wells country, not outside. I'm bettin' you'll be able to pick up a nice fresh trail of shod hoofs within half a mile of where them four fellers left the train. That trail will then hit for the nastiest, toughest-ridin' spots which is to be found in that end of the county. An' that's sayin' somethin'. See if I'm right."

And sheriff Sam Flick was indisputably right.

But Doane's trouble had not come from rough country, or a hard ride. He went through that like a bullet goes through paper. As the sheriff had prophesied, there was a fresh hoof trail within a few hundred yards of where the train had stopped. One of the band had evidently managed the horses. The trail turned straight north into the desert country, avoiding what scant habitation existed in the neighborhood of Sand Wells Junction.

Doane followed fast and light, with the quart canteen of water and a pocketful of dried jerky for food. He intended to hit the fresh trail for perhaps a day, to make certain of its general description, unless there was a luckier break. If the trail continued northward, or turned into the foothills of the Sierra Nueva, as he suspected, a man hunt might be outfitted with greater swiftness and ease from the sheriff's office in San Loreto, with riders coming down on the scene rather than working up from Sand Wells.

Hours later he noticed that the animal had begun to limp. Glancing down, he saw that the right foreleg was badly swollen; he slid out of his saddle and looked at the leg. Snakebite! That's why the horse had flinched; a rattler had struck him and Doane hadn't even known it! Maybe the rattler had lost his rattles. Anyway, there it was. He cut the swelling and applied a tourniquet.

He'd made a bad mistake in riding the animal so long; he'd given the poison a good start. But he told himself it wasn't serious; rattler's bite doesn't often kill stock.

But the animal's foreleg continued to swell, with a rapidity that hurled Doane into a momentary panic. An hour later he took mercy on the beast and shot it. He looked to his canteen. Less than a pint of water left! He made some calculations. He would go on to the waterhole, rest there through part of the night, drink until his system was saturated with moisture, then head back for Sand Wells with a brimming canteen to see him through. It was the only sensible thing to do. The riders he followed had also been making track for the waterhole, and that lured him on, to see what general course they would take in leaving.

The waterhole proved to be farther than five miles . . . twice that. But the outlaw trail didn't trouble to turn into it. The waterhole was dry. A big shot of dynamite had been exploded in it, cracking the lower structure. And in Doane's canteen were just two man-sized drinks; his throat was already parched.

"Dry!"

It was a cry from cracked, fevered lips. The hour was sunset. Twenty-four hours after he had discovered a waterhole that was only so much hard-baked mud, Doane dropped to his knee in the sunset light and held his tongue against the canteen cover of burlap. There was no saliva on his tongue, but on the covering of that canteen was a circle of moisture three or four inches wide. The circle was a deep caved dent in the side of the canteen.

Doane had fallen. When he pulled the canteen from under him the damage was done. The fall had dented the metal side of the canteen and a soldered seam had cracked. Not a drop left inside. He sobbed thickly. For hours his throat had cried just to taste the stuff, just for him to let a drop or two between thick, swollen lips, just for a drop of water in that burning, choking throat of his. For seeming hours he had been able to think only of that, to imagine only the utter ecstasy of the touch of moisture.

He had goaded himself on with the thought. He had lured himself on step by step with the promise. At sunset that iron will of his had promised the weakened, tortured body that there would be rest and —one swallow of water! Countless times, over and over, he had imagined it. He would take the water drop by drop; hold it on his tongue, feel it on his palate; drop by drop it would drip down the leather-cracked throat. Or would he take the swallow with one lustful, trembling, satisfying gulp? A thousand times he had imagined it, while the force of an iron will drove his unsteady body on.

The fall had come within five yards of the mark he had set for himself, the spot where he would finally sink down, rest and drink. Driven muscles had weakened with eagerness. He was cheated now beyond any human measure. He knew only despair. But his warped mind was no longer concerned with the despair of death; only with the measure of his loss—that pitiful quantity of stale water that was gone!

He cracked. He would gladly have traded his life for just one drink of water. He sobbed futilely, hoarsely, gaspingly.

He would have gladly traded his life for just one drink of water.

The vivid, desert sunset faded. Night spread shadow over a ghostland of barren, grotesque forms; weird buttes and rock heaps, fantastic ridges and gullies—and it spread darkness over a man who lay in the dust where he had fallen, his lips pressed against the dry covering of a canteen. The heat of the day was suddenly gone and it was chill. . . .

A shivering body brought Doane to consciousness. For a time his brain was clear again. He coolly measured his chances. Fifteen or eighteen miles now would see him to Sand Wells. He told himself that he could make it. It was possible. He had to make it!

Steeled in mind, he got to his feet. He carefully fixed his direction from the stars. Step by step, he began to move on. He walked a long way now before he tripped and fell. He pushed up and went on. . . .

This was repeated countless times. His hands and knees were bloody. His clothing was ripped to shreds on the knees and legs. Finally an unknown, far-away voice seemingly began to call to him:

"You can't do it! No man could do it! Give up! Once you give up, death comes more easily!"

Doane fought that voice. He cursed and screamed at it. But no articulate sound actually came from those hard-swollen lips of his. There were long periods of time when he did forget. There were times when visions gave him water, a world filled with water, cool and sweet; and he bathed lustfully in it, drank to his fill of it. Other times when he nakedly fought the fires of hell and died a hundred deaths by torture. There were long periods of time when he lay quietly where he fell. Times when he slept. But always he staggered on.

Shortly after dawn his delirium-fevered mind cleared again for a few seconds. And this disclosed the grimmest joke of all. The coming sun rose in the wrong quarter of the compass. He was moving in the wrong direction! He had turned, wandering, back-tracked himself—

Sunrise threw those curiously floating, far peaks of the Sierra Nueva into view. They had not changed. No farther away; no closer. Cool, distant, magical. A grotesque caricature of a man threw up one hand toward the mountains which a crazed mind still somehow knew to be real. A smile that couldn't move the stiff, swollen lips lighted in the bloodshot eyes.

He could hear again the laugh and gurgle of water in the granite creek-beds. The music of it. He could see the sparkling, clear, sweet streams of water in the canyons and ravines. On his hands and knees Doane crept forward, toward the ranges that lay distant two days' march, for a strong man with food and water.

"Aquí 'sta! Por Dios, some man is lost—afoot! There is his canteen!"

Five hard-ridden mounts and a pack animal that carried water tins came to rein in a compact group.

The canteen lay on the ground before them, half tilted against a rock. It had a dented, caved side. There were other things to be seen in the dust. A man's body had laid there. Struggled. The marks where the man had tried to get to his feet and again lay still. There were the marks of his raw knees. And to the south went the wavering track where he had disappeared.

"What do you think?"

"I think"—a lean, straight old vaquero smiled—"that a certain man who never fails has failed. According to what I heard, he left Sand Wells three mornings ago, alone. Here is the way he returns!"

"How old is the track?"

Ten hours—twelve. But it is still a long way from here to Sand Wells. This man was already weak. He had no water. So I think he must have discovered how the Senor La Rue put dynamite in the north waterhole, to check cattle from disappearing in that direction."

A single rider reined his mount away, moving slowly along the trail of uneven footprints. He rode a hundred yards, halted and returned to the group. He nodded his head in agreement with the spokesman.

The saddlemen had dark, vigilant eyes. Even now one scanned the horizons, straight in the saddle with a certain tenseness in the poise. The man who read the scant sign of the footprints so intuitively was known as Pedro Salvador; but his stolid-appearing features showed a heritage that was more Indian than Mexican. His age was indeterminate, except that there was gray in the coarse, straight hair that showed under the dusty brim of his sombrero. Two others were middle-aged men, the fourth a youth.

The fifth rider, at a distance of fifty yards, would have been taken for a man, her sex unrecognizable under the garb she wore. She was young, and clothed like the men—in worn chaps, boots, a man's faded shirt, and a wide-brimmed Stetson. Her fine, black hair was cut in a bob that was shorter than Pedro Salvador's grayed locks. But at closer distance the delicate mold of her profile, or the curve of her lips, the throat, the fine dark eyes spoke for themselves. Nearby, the working clothes of the hard-bitten cowman served only to accentuate the feminine daintiness by harsh contrast.

"Pedro!" she called. "The cool of the night will have kept this man alive. His track will wander. But he won't be dead this morning."

"But—soon!" corrected Pedro. "La Rue would be equally behind his coming here. Let them look after themselves, bury their own dead!"

The girl seemed to consider this for a long while.

"I suppose," she admitted. "But we'll have to find him."

The tall vaquero expressed his amazement. "With a railroad posse now riding out of Sand Wells? With every sheriff and deputy and down-country settler sitting on the ridges, watching with glasses? We do this for the enemy, so he won't fail next time?"

"Yes," said the girl. "We've got to. Spread out! The track will circle after a while."

Experienced in desert ways, the riders separated. At the end of an hour they trailed down a man who looked scarcely human. His mad, burning eyes were fixed on the far peaks. He crawled inch by inch forward across the vast floor of the morning-hot desert on bare hands and knees. He babbled to himself in swollen-lipped words. There was nothing sane in his eyes or in his mind, but within him there was still that mighty, fundamental spirit of the man—and this it was that had kept him fighting on.

Jim Doane, deputy sheriff, opened sane eyes for the first time some three days later. He looked with amazement at the room in which he lay, at the ceiling over his head. In his mind roared the fragments of a thousand fantastic dreams. Water—water—water! Each of those dreams devolved upon water in one form or another. There were deep pools fringed with lush meadow grass and tulips; there were broad, brimming rivers; there were mountains, like the high country of the Sierra Nueva, where little creeks laughed and brawled down countless walled canyons and ravines. There were cold blue lakes, walled in with snow and ice.

There were also gigantic, ghastly, red infernos, and landscapes of smoking hot rock; but even in these there had been water—only Doane could never quite reach it. He was a man who fought all the tortures of hell, and lived through by a miracle.

He lay back on his bed for a long while now, looking at the ceiling and the walls. Then terror caught at him again. This was another false dream! He raised himself on his elbow, on the point of screaming: "Water! Water! For God's sake . . . water!"

He trembled in every muscle. Cold fear-sweat broke out on him. Curiously, he felt of the sheet spread over his body, felt of the bed frame. The fear hung on. Then a door opened.

Correspondence Courses

Veterans administration has negotiated contracts with 38 educational institutions throughout the country authorizing them to furnish correspondence and extension courses by mail to veterans eligible for educational benefits under veterans legislation.

Courses offered cover virtually every educational field from academic subjects to a wide variety of trades and professions. Approximately 500,000 veterans already are enrolled under the government program in schools and colleges, or taking on-the-job training and further thousands already employed are asking opportunity to further their education by mail.

The veteran receives no subsistence while pursuing a correspondence course and the total cost of all such courses may not exceed $500. Of the 38 contracts thus far signed, 25 are with colleges and universities in 19 states. Fifteen of these offer high school as well as college courses. The balance of 13 are trade and business schools offering courses in such subjects as refrigeration, radio electronics, engineering, television, journalism, federal income tax, machine drafting, hotel training, traffic management, accounting and filing.

Application for these correspondence courses should be made at your nearest Veterans Administration regional office.

Questions and Answers

Q. My daughter's husband was honorably discharged in December, 1945, after two years and three months overseas. She never received an allotment. In 1943 she wrote in and asked why. She received an answer saying her husband never signed an allotment to her. But they sent papers to sign and she sent these in with her marriage certificate. We never heard from them again and they never returned the marriage certificate. Now she is divorced, but it is not a year yet. Is she still eligible for this allotment?—Mrs. W. W., Mt. Angel, Ore.

A. I believe she is eligible, but write to Army Central Adjustment Office, 4300 Goodfellow Blvd., St. Louis 20, Mo., and give all details.

Q. How would I get a business loan through? I would love to have a grocery store. I went to general headquarters, but they don't tell me anything. They don't care whether a veteran gets anything or not. Give me all the information possible.—World War II veteran, A. O., Ropesville, Texas.

A. First, find a bank or other lender who is making G.I. loans. Tell him your story, your background, how much money you have, if any, and what you want to use the loan for. If he thinks you are a good risk, he will send in the papers for your eligibility certificate and make the loan. Your local chamber of commerce, local Red Cross, or county agent can help you find a lender making these loans and give you all details.

Q. My husband deserted me and my two children. He went to the navy, but also deserted there for 7 months and 21 days. When they got him back in the service they gave him 3 years in prison. We drew an allotment while he was in service, but it stopped when he was out. Now he is overseas and we have a divorce. Should the children be drawing from him? The navy was to notify me if he went back to duty, but hasn't. What shall I do?—Mrs. A. M. W., Bluff, N. C.

A. The navy suggests that you write to Field Services, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, Navy Department, Cleveland, Ohio, and explain your situation, giving all details possible.

Q. My husband is with the 6th marines in China. He has more points than are required for a discharge, but he is a regular. He has been overseas 16 months. How long will he have to remain overseas? He has been in the service for over 10 years.—Mrs. J. D. P., Lincoln, Neb.

A. Ordinarily a tour of overseas duty in the marines for a regular is 24 months unless his enlistment is up prior to that time.

Q. Will a serviceman returned from Manila so ill with malaria it appeared he would die and now improved be able to work after filing for a pension? He filed for the pension while in the hospital, but believes now he could farm a little, could he draw money like other soldiers do?—Mrs. D. S., Luther, Tenn.

A. A disability pension will not interfere with his drawing adjusted compensation for self-employment if he is eligible for such compensation and able to work. Apply to your nearest state unemployment compensation office.

ORLAND PARK

by Mrs. S. S. Knox

On Wednesday May 15th the Orland Park school presented their Spring Musical Festival at the school gymnasium. My wife and I were among the proud parents and friends privileged to attend. We would like to extend our sincere thanks and appreciation to the marvelous directorial efforts of Miss Margaret Dougherty who combined the talents of our boys and girls of Orland Park into a completely enjoyable evening. A vote of thanks also to Mrs. Lenard Hedlund who conducted the musical accompaniment so creditably.

Again we say thanks to all concerned.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Riemenschneider of Palos Park are the proud parents of a baby girl, born on Sunday, Mothers Day, May 12th at St. Francis hospital in Blue Island. The baby weighed 7 lbs. 8 oz. at birth and has been named Marilyn Jean. Mother and daughter are doing fine.

Papa Joe is employed by the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. in Downers Grove, and Mrs. Joe is the former Gertrude Henning, also with the Telephone Co. as operator at the Palos office.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker of Orland Park and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Bowman and sons, Clifford and Richard spent the weekend in Bangor, Michigan, visiting relatives. Mr. Bowman is a son of Mrs. Baker.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hallinan and children have moved to Calumet Park. The Orland Park Public Library will be closed, Thursday, May 30th because of Memorial Day.

Ernest J. Wood Returns to Orland Park

The Kewanee Ford garage established in 1936 by C. E. Maddox, W. R. Schussler and Ernest J. Wood was sold last week to Bennett & Son, natives of Kewanee. Ernest Wood expects to vacation at his home on West Ave. before taking up his work on Industrial Engineering and Factory Cost Accounting.

Receives Letter From Daughter In Tokyo

The following is the first letter Mrs. Myrtle P. Davis of Mokena received from her daughter, after she arrived in Japan where she is secretary to the "War Crimes Tribunal" at Tokyo:

Monday, April 15, 1946

Dearest Mother:

Today is the first day I've been out of the kinks since I've been here. Took me quite a while to recover from the trip. After Honolulu, we stopped at Guam (2 days), then Kwa-Jeyin and Iwo Jima. We arrived here on the 3rd.

I was first at the YWCA and have now transferred to "Hilltop". There are several billets for women, but this is generally conceded to be the best, and I feel extremely lucky to get in here. Its like a modern hotel. I have a roommate from Boston, who is much older.

The food here and the way its prepared would amaze you. Very fancy. We have a dining room on the first floor and dozens of Japanese girls as waitresses. They are awfully cute, and I have made a hit with them. My latest conquest grabs me by the arm when I walk in and leads me to her table. There are lots of room girls too, and they do our personal laundry for us. We have cleaning facilities, a beauty parlor in the building and are living in pretty high style. The few things we do have to pay for are nominal. We use only yen, and a yen is 1-5 of a dollar. Transportation and all entertainment is free, and 75c per day is withheld from our pay for meals.

I haven't seen many of the sights yet, so will have to tell you about that later. The only place I have been was to hear the Nippon Philharmonic and it was very good.

I work in the Meiji Building which faces the moat that surrounds the palace grounds. However, in a few days we are all going to transfer to the War Ministry building.

Japan is famous mostly for its block prints and lacquer ware, not to mention the Kimonos. You can pay as much as 4000 yen for a Kimono and I am just not in the market for that kind of thing. All Japanese goods are very high, and I am going to do considerable shopping around before making any purchases. Forgot to tell you that we have access to Army PX's and get most of the supplies we need. The mail service is wonderful. Have been getting letters in 6 or 7 days.

I think that everything will turn out fine here. I have to admit that I had a few qualms about coming.....
Much love,
Leila

Remember Our Great Inheritance—

IT IS BY CONTRAST that most things are valued. In the lands of despots, millions pray seemingly in vain for their daily bread. Their suffering makes us more conscious of our blessings in this glorious land, as we dedicate our lives, resources and energy to their quick and lasting relief.

May we do this humbly, realizing that our own good fortune of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness has been laboriously maintained for us. It is our inheritance from a pioneer citizenry of which our family was a part.

Demonstration of appreciation is a natural American custom. That's why certain days are set aside each year for memorial observance. It is both a privilege and an obligation to visit our cemetery; to beautify and permanently identify the resting place of those who gave us our name, our talents and a finer, easier life because of their devotion to us, their children.

Off the Runway

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 613-3
by 2nd Lt. Erylne Conel

Rubinkam Airport: New Cubs and Taylorcrafts arrived Saturday May 18th. I was fortunate to be the first pilot to spread the new shiny wings of the first Cub to arrive on the field. Pilots Jack Morton, Walter Wolak, Fred Hennig, Linda Tattersfield, Lucille Schutte and Instructor Ray Starzyk and Flight Manager Roy Cleveland were all eager beaver to unstiffen the controls, and gave the ships a good start along the sky road. More new planes and equipment are scheduled to arrive this week.

I dip my wings to Russ Langenderfer, young son of Airport Owner, L. H. Langenderfer, for doing an excellent job scrubbing the flight office. That's one good way to build up muscle for future piloting.

Shindig and Wing Dip: Preparations were going pell mell this weekend for the Card and Bunco party to be held Saturday, May 25 in the new Clubhouse at Rubinkam Airport. Five hungry pilots, all too pressed for time to eat, spent about one "drooling" hour discussing who would make the best sandwiches and cakes for party refreshments. Mrs. Hennig, Mrs. Morton, Mrs. Jones and Linda Tattersfield are to be the gracious culinary artists.

Practically every Civil Air Patrol pilot in this area is planning to wing the trip Sunday, May 26 to the new University of Illinois Airport. The occasion is a State Wide Wing Maneuver, complete with an air show. In Chicago Civil Air Patrol members are on the lookout for jobs Air Force Vets can fill. If you know of any openings in any line, please contact me, and I will send a Vet hand picked by Air Placement Center experts for interview.

Check Points: Kaiser-Frazer are building an Airport in North Hollywood, complete with club, "skyroom" and swimming pool. There's a Wagon wheel Guest Ranch near Tucson, Arizona where you can land and hangar your plane within a few hundred feet of resort hotel facilities. Watch for two well known local pilots to start a barnstorming tour. Municipal Airport is 2nd largest in the U. S. with 8,624,888 square feet of paved runway and taxi strips. The 25 Jet planes now spanning the nation in mass flight should be somewhere in this territory Thursday, May 23, travelling from Washington D. C. to Chanute Field.

Chicago-Hammond Airport: Flying into this port is always a pleasure. Harriet Draybeck, Flight Office Manager recently made her x-country to Joliet and has a new assistant, Grenadene Woerner, Manager John Dow said that on Sunday, May 19 in celebration of "I Am An American Day" five men, including Gov. Gates of Indiana and Mayor Bertram of Hammond were being flown from the field to dinner at the country club in Kankakee. Each of the five men had to have a plane and pilot for himself because tiny two place Cubs are the only planes capable of squeezing into the small country club landing strip. I hope the dinner wasn't too large, and that the men didn't have too difficulty squeezing back into the Cubs.

At Prosperi Airport line boy Harry Lambert of Tinley Park is so enthusiastic about the new tie down equipment, that he puts it to use, even when a plane is parking for a short five or ten minutes.

Air Clowns: Eight pilots of the Flying Tiger Air Circus recently got themselves out on a limb, or rather got their clothes out on the wrong clothesline in Denver, Colo. Unable to get laundry service, they did their own week's washing and aired it out the front windows of the Argonaut hotel. Complaints brought the police who ordered the clothing taken in. Okay, said the pilots, it's dry now anyway.

That's all for now.

Mr. Paul Gardner announces the marriage of his son James to the former Miss Karen Sirlanni of Des Moines, Iowa. The ceremony was performed by Judge John Bell in his home at Troy, Kansas Saturday evening May 18 with the bride's brother and sister-in-law and Mrs. Paul Gardner as witnesses.

The bride was attired in a brown suit and white sheer blouse and wore a shoulder corsage of white gardenias tied with a silver ribbon.

The bride's sister-in-law who served her as maid of honor wore a similar brown suit with a matching gardenia corsage. It was a double wedding and after the above ceremony was performed Judge Bell united the bride's brother Vincent Sirlanni and Miss Nikkie Nicholson in marriage with the new Mr. and Mrs. James Gardner as witnesses.

Following the double ceremony the wedding party and immediate families departed for St. Joseph, Missouri where a sumptuous wedding dinner was enjoyed. Later the Gardners left on a short honeymoon spent at Cameron Missouri.

They are at present at home to their friends and neighbors at the home by the groom's father Paul Gardner where they plan to live temporarily during the present housing shortage.

It means no more "lazy" appliances—there'll be enough circuits to operate them efficiently—and the wonderful new ones you are planning to own. It means plenty of convenience outlets to do away with troublesome extension cords. And you'll want multiple switches to light the way ahead as you enter a room.

Plan now for adequate wiring when materials are available—enjoy a new, more pleasant way of living. See us or your electrical contractor and learn how easy and inexpensive it is.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 19, was:

"MORTALS AND IMMORTALS"

The Golden Text was:

"Henceforth know we no man after the flesh: yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more" (II Cor. 5: 16).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind. . . . And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness. . . . Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. . . . For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." (Eph. 4, I Cor. 15).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"God is the Principle of man, and man is the idea of God. Hence man is not mortal nor material. Mortals will disappear, and immortals, or the children of God, will appear as the only and eternal verities of man. Mortals are not fallen children of God. They never had a perfect state of being which may subsequently be regained. They were, from the beginning of mortal history, 'conceived in sin and brought forth in iniquity.' Mortality is 'finally swallowed up in immortality. Sin, sickness and death must disappear to give place to the facts which belong to immortal man. Learn this, O mortal, and earnestly seek the spiritual status of man, which is outside of all material selfhood.'" (p. 476).

The Editor of the News-Bulletin
Mokena, Illinois.

Dear Sir:
I have never been interviewed by your reporter regarding New Lenox Incorporation, but had I been asked "why I did not favor New Lenox Incorporation" my answer would not have been that I hadn't given it much thought. It is my opinion that most of our citizens who favor Incorporation haven't given it much thought, excepting a few perhaps who hope to gain something at some other citizen's expense.

Most of our people have provided themselves with their own water and sewerage systems and at their own expense, but there are a few whose systems are inadequate or possibly lacking entirely, who have golden dreams of acquiring their improvements and letting his neighbor foot the bill. And believe me it will be plenty. At five dollars per front foot for sewer only, figure it out for yourself. There are vacant lots, which if sewers, water etc. are provided will sell at much higher prices as improved lots but the poor sucker who buys them will in addition pay the assessments for these improvements the rest of his life.

Then if Incorporation comes there will be licenses thrust upon your merchant who in turn will pass them on to you. Your grocer, your coal dealer, your milk man and even your insurance agent. You will have a policeman and firemen to pay, not that they should not be paid, but I believe that the legal minimum is $175.00 per month. Can you afford it? Can you afford to build a jail? Can you afford to pay a vehicle tax? Can you afford to buy a permit to paint your house or repair your porch? And do you want some politically minded building inspector to tell you how you shall do it? Do you want your children to have to get permission to solicit funds for their youth center? Do you realize that ordinances could be passed to prevent the delivery of things you purchased in Joliet or Chicago?

Do you not realize that you could if, you so chose, have a water system or sewerage system or street lights or sidewalks without Incorporation just as you have your commendable fire department?

Do you not also realize that each year you are losing more and more of your freedom?

It is doubtless true that there are a few objectionable things about this town but they are minor. Are they not less objectionable than many things in Joliet or Chicago?

Your town has tripled in size and population in the last fifteen years.

Have the surrounding small incorporated towns achieved this distinction? There must be something about New Lenox as it is, that has made it prosper far above any other small town in this vicinity.

I will quote a paragraph from a letter written by my son from the So. Pacific last year "you mentioned in your last letter about New Lenox being incorporated but you did not say how you felt about it. I hope that they do not incorporate because I would like to come back home and find New Lenox just as it was when I left".

My youngest son, now in the army, has expressed the same views. Ask your children if they want this town incorporated.

I have lived in other incorporated towns before I came here thirty-seven years ago but never have I known the joy and contentment elsewhere of living in this town too lovely to change.

Yours Truly

Howard R. Ayres.

Incorporation Facts

I am in favor of Incorporation for New Lenox. Why? Well I was raised in an incorporated town and served on its board and I know a little about it. I have little to gain from it where I am living, but we do have to start sometime and why not now? The first accomplishment of course is to vote for incorporation. Your next step is good board members. Street lights will be assured within the next year or two which is well worth getting. Most of you know that for years we have been fighting a zoning regulation by outside interests. Its up again right now and may be put over us. With incorporation we do our own zoning. We have something to say about it. Without incorporation outside interests will tell us what to do. . . . which do you prefer?

Restriction of raising chickens and hogs in town is another minor question that has been discussed. Most or all incorporated towns take in parts of farms. As far as I know there have been no restrictions passed to keep these people from raising poultry or hogs. Most of you should know that regardless whether a town is or is not incorporated a condition that is considered a nuisance can be stopped. I understand several years ago some one in New Lenox was stopped from having hogs in town by the neighbors on account of the odor, so don't let that change your vote.

Last year the wagon was put ahead of the horse and a lot of you thought something was going to be put over you. That was your right to be skeptical and want more time to look into incorporation. You have had a year to do this and I think you have gotten a lot of facts and we have tried to give you, honest facts, sincere efforts and a ticket that will be yours to make. We have no candidates. I am just for progress for New Lenox.

Open Drive For Salvation Army Funds

A campaign to raise $32,350 for The Salvation Army of Joliet will be opened the first week in June, according to an announcement made by John E. Anderson, general chairman of the drive.

"Money raised by The Salvation Army will be used for the expansion of many activities which have already been put into operation to meet problems arising as a result of the war," said Anderson. Funds are also needed for the expansion and remodeling of the existing facilities at The Salvation Army headquarters, 237 E. Cass St., Joliet, Ill.

"Coincident with the need for building repairs and extensions," said Anderson, "is the need for additional equipment, such as facilities in the young people's clubrooms."

ment, such as facilities in the young people's clubrooms."

"No capital campaign to provide money for such purposes has ever been held in this city," said Anderson.

Several activities now being carried on by The Salvation Army in this and in adjacent communities will benefit from funds raised in the forthcoming campaign.

"Several hundred young people visited the recreation hall and the craft rooms at this club last year," said Anderson. "Additional personnel are needed to take care of the many newcomers who constantly are being attracted to the club. We believe that activities such as these, and their extension, should have a wide appeal to the people of this city, since such clubs as this undoubtedly form an important way of taking young people off the street and of channeling their energies into wholesome recreation."

National Parks Ready For '46 Travel Rush

(By WNU Features)

America is hitting the vacation trail this spring and summer and the crowds in the national parks are expected to be the greatest in their history. Some of the parks are already open, and all of them will be operating at full schedule by June, says Newton B. Drury, director of the National Park Service.

Lodges and hotels which have been closed for three years are being reconditioned. New staffs are being recruited and trained for the summer season.

Few of the sightseeing busses used in the national parks were suitable for war use, so most of the fleets are still intact.

Yellowstone, Yosemite, Grand Canyon and Glacier national parks will have complete sightseeing services.

It is expected that enough manpower will be available to restore full service in the other parks of the system.

Some reconditioning work may take more than six months.

Staffs may not be as complete and skilled as they were before 1941, but the concessionaires stated their plans are being rushed and they have high hopes of giving good service by June.

More than $500,000 for reconditioning the cabins, lodges and cafeterias in Grand Canyon, Bryce and Zion national parks and at Cedar Breaks national monument is being spent by the Union Pacific railroad, which operates the facilities in these parks.

The renovation program also includes purchase of 22 new 29-passenger busses and a fleet of 9-passenger sedans for charter service.

The prewar five-day all-expense tours through all the parks and shorter tours in Zion, Bryce and Grand Canyon will be resumed.

Ranger crews maintained by the national park system during the war years for vital conservation work will have their ranks augmented to protect the parks' natural beauties and resources.

They'll also protect the crowds, who often take chances in the unfamiliar wilds.

An intensive road-building and road-improvement program is planned by the department of the interior, continuing through 1946 and 1947, to meet the influx of automobile tourists who will follow in the wake of new car production.

While the national parks are always free and open, the usual tourist facilities were suspended during the war. Park attendance dropped from a high of 21,050,428 visitors in 1941 to a new low of 6,908,749 in 1943.

That the 1946 total will surpass the attendance of 1941 is indicated by the rush of late fall and winter visitors which started immediately after V-J Day.

Shenandoah national park, in Virginia's Blue Ridge mountains, was virtually isolated during gas rationing, but on the Sunday following the surrender of Japan four cars a minute were checked in at the park.

Eastern Parks Offer Variety To The Tourist

The Shenandoah and Smoky mountains national parks offer an unsurpassed beauty treat to mid-westerners whose previous vacations have shown them the wonders of the Rockies.

Great Smoky mountains national park embraces 460,000 acres, of which 200,000 are still covered by primeval forests. The peaks and ridges of the range, rising above 6,000 feet, and almost always veiled in mist, are the starting point of some 600 miles of trout streams.

The north entrance to the park is 30 miles southeast of Knoxville, Tenn., making it easily accessible by all types of transportation. Busses make two round trips from Knoxville through the park daily. There are two camp grounds in the park, and hotel and tourist camp facilities are available in nearby cities and towns and at Knoxville and Asheville.

Blue Ridge national parkway, a 485-mile strip of parkland connecting the Great Smoky mountains and Shenandoah national parks, will eventually have a modern highway running its entire length. U. S. route 11 provides an almost direct connection between the two parks at present.

A more scenic approach to Shenandoah from north of Roanoke, Va., is along the completed portion of the parkway, which connects with Skyline drive running the entire length of the park along the crest of the Blue Ridge.

The Skyline drive is 107 miles long, with parking areas, picnic grounds and a camping area along its length. Visitors may enjoy the magnificent scenery of the Shenandoah valley's fertile farmlands on the west and the rolling hills of the Piedmont plateau on the east.

HALF DOME . . . At Big Oak Flat entrance to Yosemite Valley.

Oregon Caves Are Opened

GRANTS PASS, ORE.—The Oregon caves recreational area near here, which were closed during the war years, will reopen late in May under the national park service. Harold B. Say has been appointed general manager of the resort.

The caverns were discovered in 1874 when Elijah Davidson, an early settler, shot at a bear. The wounded bear disappeared into a hole in the mountainside, and Davidson followed with a pitch torch to find a great underground world.

Before the war, increasing thousands each year were taking the 19-mile drive to the caves up through the timbered Siskiyou mountains from the Redwood highway.

The weird and beautiful underground chambers and the Swiss chalet lodge, in a canyon at the mouth of the caves, are expected to break all attendance records as the travel season opens for 1946.

ANGEL LANDING . . . Zion national park, rises 1,425 feet above the floor of the canyon. There is a foot trail to the top.

Seven Rocky Mountain Parks Are Open

The vacation possibilities offered by Glacier, Grand Teton, Mesa Verde, Yellowstone, Wind cave, Rocky mountain and Bryce Canyon national parks are almost limitless. All of them are in the Rocky mountain-plains area and cover approximately four million acres.

They range from the historic wonders of Mesa Verde, with their story of an ages-old Indian civilization; the geysers and waterfalls of Yellowstone; the mountain trails and hidden lakes at Glacier; to the thrills of mountain climbing on Grand Teton's snowy peaks.

One of the most interesting of America's prehistoric sites and a major archeological preserve is Mesa Verde national park in south-western Colorado.

Excavations on the mesa have revealed an amazing story of the pre-historic Indians.

FINDING A NEW SENSE OF VALUES

LESSON TEXT—Luke 12:19, 20; 18:24-30; 19:1-10.

MEMORY SELECTION—The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.—Romans 14:17.

Money, riches, possessions—that's what men are living and striving for in our day. It is going to seem a bit strange, but it will be very salutary to stress once again the eternal truth, best summarized by our Lord Jesus when he said, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (Luke 12:15).

I. Don't Depend on Riches (12:19, 20).

The rich man increased in selfishness as he increased in wealth. He began to feel secure because he had laid up much goods. Now he became proud and boastful. He thought he saw years of comfort and ease ahead. Evidently he had not read, or did not believe, the words of Scripture, "Boast not thyself of tomorrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth" (Prov. 27:1; see also James 4:13-17).

Well, can a man depend on riches? The answer is no. They are here today and gone tomorrow. Man himself is here today and gone tomorrow. When he goes, he leaves all that he has unless he has invested it for God.

Money is like a broken reed. The man who leans on it will not only fall, but will pierce himself through with many sorrows (I. Tim. 6:9, 10). Don't depend on riches—they will miserably fail you in your hour of need.

II. Beware of the Snare of Riches (18:24-27).

The rich young ruler had come running to Jesus to seek eternal life, but had turned away sorrowful when he found that a man cannot love money and love God at the same time.

Jesus improved the opportunity to point out that it is impossible for a rich man to be saved, except as the grace of God gets hold of him and sets him free from dependence on his wealth.

Apart from the grace of God, it is so easy for a rich man or woman to trust in riches, and to feel no need of God.

Look again at I Timothy 6:9, 10 and you will see that even the desire to be rich leads a man into a temptation and a snare. The man of God is warned to "flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness," and thus to be able to "fight the good fight of faith" (I Tim. 6:11, 12).

We repeat that all this has a strange sound to modern ears, so accustomed to the worldly philosophy of trust in things and in dollars. We need to warn our young men and women about the awful danger of loving money.

There is something infinitely better than riches, and that is, what we find in our next point.

III. Seek True Riches in Christ (18:28-30).

Peter and the other disciples had forsaken all the things of the world to follow Christ, and now as he reminds the Lord of that fact, he receives the assurance that there is a higher level of riches and reward for the loyal disciple.

God will never be in debt to anyone. There is no sacrifice made for his glory which does not find its glorious recompense, and no burden borne for his sake which does not bring its rich reward.

All this is not the result of some kind of a "deal" with God. We do not serve him because we expect a reward, but the assurance of the reward is there to encourage and spur us on in life and service for him.

The fact is, spiritual currency has far higher value than the gold and silver of this world.

IV. Ask Christ to Deliver You From Riches (19:1-10).

Zacchaeus was a man well versed in the devious ways of the extortioner. He knew money, and how to make it. But he was not satisfied. He knew there was something more worth while than riches. His life was empty.

He sought Jesus. One look from the Master and he knew that he must lay his sinful heart open before him in confession. Salvation came to Zacchaeus that day.

Here, then, is the way to be delivered from the snare of riches—take Jesus Christ as your Saviour and Lord. He may then entrust riches to your care to use for him, but he will deliver you from a love for gold and from the folly of putting your trust in it.

The person who lives for riches is lost (v. 10), caught in a snare (I Tim. 6:9, 10), trusting in something that will fail him when most needed (Luke 12:19, 20), and trusting something which will keep him from God (Luke 18:24-27), unless there is grace to flee from it and turn to God.

JOHN L. LEWIS STRATEGY

WASHINGTON. — John L. Lewis confided his strike strategy to a friend the other day as follows:

"Before you can get action, you've got to have a crisis. And in any crisis, someone's nerve has got to crack. I always bet that I can hold out longer than the government or the operators. My nerve won't crack first."

GOP CONGRESSMAN REWARDED

Few congressmen have enjoyed a higher rating at the White House in the last two decades than hard-hitting Richard J. Welch of California, a Republican congressman for 21 years.

Always subordinating party interest to the national welfare, Welch's rugged integrity won him the esteem of both Presidents Hoover and Roosevelt, with Harry Truman equally fond of him.

It is an axiom in congress that when Dick Welch wants something at the White House, he gets it. His last visit, to request Presidential support of another bridge connecting San Francisco and Oakland, was no exception.

Despite opposition from the navy, which contends that expanded aircraft and water-transport facilities in the bay area make a new bridge inadvisable, Welch told Truman that the bridge was imperative. Traffic on the present Oakland bridge, he said, was moving "bumper-to-bumper."

"All we are asking is a public hearing to state our case, Mr. President," said Welch, "but the navy is even opposed to that."

"This is an election year," commented Welch with a grin, "but there are no political considerations in the bridge project as far as I am concerned."

Truman may have been thinking of Welch's unflinching battle to support OPA as he replied:

"In your case, Dick, it wouldn't make any difference to me whether there were any political considerations in it or not."

CONGRESS RETREATS

It isn't often that the public rises up in protest so quickly and effectively as over the recent cutting of price control in the house of representatives. However, the "Save OPA" mail drive on congress now appears to have scored a bull's eye. Senate opposition to crippling house amendments is mounting and anti-price control senators one by one are beginning to yell "uncle!"

Despite this, OPA Boss Paul Porter and Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles are awaiting the senate showdown with crossed fingers. What they fear is a compromise senate bill — a watered-down, but still dangerous, version of the house "repeal" measure.

Porter warned of this in a recent secret conference with Bowles and other top officials when the question was raised as to whether the outspoken Bowles should continue his cannonading for air-tight OPA legislation. Bowles himself felt that it might be smart for him to pull punches temporarily.

Porter, however, vigorously advised the contrary.

"This is no time to trim our sails or for you to let down, Chester," he told Bowles.

MISSOURI POUND CAKE

President Truman's first cousins, Nellie and Ethel Noland of Independence, Mo., are writing quite a few letters these days about the famous "pound cake" which long has been a favorite delicacy of the Truman and Noland families.

Last Christmas, while Truman was in Independence for the holidays, one of the Noland sisters' cakes was featured on the menu. A writer for the Associated Press, apparently inexperienced in the kitchen, obtained the recipe and published it. Later housewives throughout the country tried their hand at preparing the cake. But something was wrong. Scores of letters began pouring into the Noland mailbox at 216 North Delaware street. Housewives were having kitchen difficulties.

A check revealed the Associated Press reporter had failed to include in the recipe one pound of butter — necessary for good results in baking the cake.

Perhaps the AP reporter was patriotic and didn't think butter should be used in cake in view of the edible fats shortage. Anyway, President Truman's cousins have been writing letters ever since.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Eighty-five professors at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton school of finance and commerce were polled regarding the continuation of OPA. Eighty-one signed a petition urging continuation of price controls. . . . Telegrams were sent to clothing manufacturers recently by the civilian production administration asking a report on the men's suit shortage. Reply was that the government's goal of 28 million men's suits will be almost met. . . . If that helps any.

Youths 18 and 19 Volunteer For Service

Col. Paul G. Armstrong, state director of selective service, today announced that 18 and 19 year old registrants are still being permitted to volunteer for induction thru selective service.

"The amendments which Congress passed on Tuesday," Col. Armstrong said, "do not restrict or prohibit any 18 or 19 year old registrant from volunteering for induction as was done previous to May 15.

"Selective service will accept volunteers ages 18 thru 34 years provided they are physically and mentally acceptable and, if fathers, do not have three or more children.

"Application for voluntary induction should be made to a registrant's own local board of jurisdiction."

Alien Veterans Should Request Citizenship Before December 31

Alien veterans of the Second World War, who served after Sept. 1, 1939 and before Dec. 27, 1945 are, by a special act of Congress, permitted to become citizens by naturalization in a much shorter time than is required of non-veterans.

Since this law expires on Dec. 31, 1946 alien veterans are urged to file at once for their citizenship. In their case the usual $8 fee is waived. Veterans still in service may also file. Illinois Service Officer Max LaBordia at 13104 S. Western Ave. Blue Island, will assist alien honorably discharged veterans in this matter.
